Quality Structure and Process Improvement: The Keys to Success

Presented by
Marc Lavin
Pfizer
&
Mark Mundy
Thermo Fisher Scientific

Quality structure and process improvement are key to the success of any pharmaceutical manufacturer in today's rapidly changing environment of moving from product development to product commercialization. Whether they are applied internally, or to third party providers engaged to support an on-going process, these elements are tantamount to not only the success of gaining product approval, but ensuring that all those that may touch the processes (internal stake holders or third party providers) are operating in the environment that provides a "Quality Structure" and supports regulatory compliance.

Don't miss this interesting workshop conversation where these two well-experienced industry experts will answer the following questions, and more:

- What is a Quality Management System (QMS) and what are the benefits expected from using one?
- What are the critical elements and tools included in a Quality Management System?
- What are the 8 steps in the Practical Process Improvement (PPI) problem solving process?
- How does PPI improve project outcomes?

Q&A will be included, too, so attend this workshop and be part of the spirited discussion!
