Identified as one of the key risk areas that manufacturers need to address in the coming year, drug price transparency reporting laws have been enacted exponentially over the last few years.

The number of states affected has grown to where almost half of the US requires manufacturers to report drug pricing, with each state having different requirements or reporting triggers. When establishing a process for reporting, manufacturers have to include multiple factors to consider when determining the reporting required in each state.

Is your head spinning yet?

This jam-packed workshop will provide a high-level overview of the many facets of the reporting requirements, triggers for reporting, and the significant fines for non-compliance in each state. So whether you're simply interested in learning more about this critical area in the business or you're tasked with challenging transparency reporting responsibilities, this workshop will be an educational resource for all.
