

DON'T PANIC!

But if you're not registered yet, you really are running out of time!

The annual Sharing Conference is happening later this month in beautiful San Diego, so if you got caught up in first quarter activity and simply forgot to secure your conference registration, we get it. But if you don't register, you will miss out on all the on-site learning and sharing, and you won't get the free year-round Sharing Alliance membership that comes with paid registration.

Lucky for you, it's not too late. You can still get the early bird rate discount registration code by reaching out to your participating vendor partner or contacting us here. In addition, the Sharing Conference discounted room block pricing ends this Friday, April 14th, so don't forget to also book your room while you're at it.

And remember that industry team discounts are available – when three from the same company are registered, a fourth may attend for free. Send us a note to see who's coming from your company and if there is a free pass still available: mail@sharingalliance.org

Time is flying. Plan your trip now and be part of this annual event for sales operations and compliance professionals. See you in San Diego!

If you are already registered, please forward this to a friend or colleague who might be interested in attending, too. Thank you from the not-for-profit Sharing Alliance!
